'DREAMER' MIGRANTS TO BE SAFE FROM TRUMP

I President Donald Trump's administration plans to consider almost all illegal immigrants subject to deportation, but will leave protections in place for immigrants known as "dreamers" who entered the country illegally as children, according to official guidelines released. The Department of Homeland Security guidance to immigration agents is part of a broader plan for border security and immigration enforcement in executive orders that Trump signed on Jan. 25. Former President Barack Obama issued an executive order in 2012 that protected 750,000 immigrants who had been brought into the United States illegally by their parents. Trump has said the issue is "very difficult" for him. REUTERS

CONDEMNATION OF ANTI-SEMITIC INCIDENTS

2 President Donald Trump delivered his first public condemnation of anti-Semitic incidents in the United States after a new spate of bomb threats to Jewish community centers around the country and vandalism in a Jewish cemetery. Several of the centers were evacuated for a time on Monday after receiving the threats, the JCC Association of North America said, and another center was evacuated on Tuesday morning in San Diego, California, according to police. Also, vandals toppled about 170 headstones at the Chesed Shel Emet Society cemetery in St. Louis, Missouri, over the weekend. "The anti-Semitic threats targeting our Jewish community and community centers are horrible and are painful and a very sad reminder of the work that still must be done to root out hate and prejudice and evil," Trump told reporters. REUTERS

EDITOR QUILTS AFTER CHILD SEX REMARKS

3 Provocative far-right commentator Milo Yiannopoulos resigned on Tuesday as an editor of the Breitbart News website after he was vilified and lost a book deal over old comments that condoned at least some intimate relations between men and young teenage boys. Yiannopoulos thanked the site for letting him transmit conservative and libertarian ideas to an audience that otherwise would never have heard them, but said he did not want his "poor choice of words" to detract from his colleagues' important work. "This is my decision alone," he told a news conference in New York city. "When your friends have done right by you, you do right by them. For me, now, that means stepping aside." REUTERS

CIA-BACKED AID FOR SYRIAN REBELS FROZEN

4 CIA-coordinated military aid for rebels in northwest Syria has been frozen since they came under major Islamist attack last month, rebel sources said, raising doubts about foreign support key to their war against President Bashar al-Assad. Rebel officials said that no official explanation had been given for the move this month following the jihadist assault, though several said they believed the main objective was to prevent arms and cash falling into Islamist militant hands. But they said they expected the aid freeze to be temporary. The halt in assistance, which has included salaries, training, ammunition and in some cases guided anti-tank missiles, is a response to jihadist attacks and has nothing to do with President Donald Trump replacing Barack Obama, two officials familiar with the CIA-led program said. REUTERS

Social sports leagues: All fun and games

Sports help foster friendships for city's busy young professionals.

ERIN TIERNAN
@erintiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

As a hockey game finished up at Reilly Memorial Rink in Brighton Monday night, 40 sneaker-clad co-eds in brightly colored shirts took over the ice. They looked ready for a scrimmage.

The name of the game? Broomball.

It's one of nearly two dozen sports offered to adults by a handful of sports leagues around Boston. Looking for a little competition? Check out the hockey, basketball or softball leagues. Broomball tends to be a little more laid back.

The fast moving, 40-minute games consist of a couple dozen people sliding around the ice in shoes chasing after a big orange ball with rubber sticks.

"It's a little silly," said ref Dan Deruvo, who likened the sport to hockey — with a few variations. "It's about being social, having fun and then heading to the bar after to have some drinks together."

Broomball is one of the "quirkier" sports offered by Social Boston Sports, a company that organizes games and leagues for its 18,000 active members.

Besides the classics like volleyball and bowling, participants can join corn hole leagues, dodgeball, kickball and inner tube water polo, if you're into that kind of thing.

The leagues at Social Boston Sports are tailored to young professionals. They take place after work, most of the leagues are co-ed and drinks are usually included.

"We started SBS to create a community in Boston that would allow us and others to continue having the same fun you had in college while meeting other awesome people and new friends throughout the city," said Jason Obey, a Bentley graduate who founded the company with friends 10 years ago.

For a lot of young people who work and live in Boston, it's become a resource to meet people and have a little fun.

"Sports break down barriers. Everyone is equal on the playing field, so it's a really good way for people to organically meet one another," Maggie Walsh, communications director, said.

When Brianna Allison, a 26-year-old accountant from New Hampshire moved to Somerville in July, it was a way for her to connect with her community and make friends in a new city.

"It's a good way to be active and meet new friends," she said. Allison plays softball, broomball and bowls with Boston Social Sports.

Melissa Kosztowny and Colin Parmalee of Brighton met playing broomball as free agents two years ago. They linked up with a couple of friends and now play together on their own team. Social Boston Sports allows players to sign up as singles, small groups or whole teams.

All the Social Boston Sports leagues benefit from sponsorships with local bars. On game nights throughout the seven-week seasons, players will get hooked up with cheap drinks or discounted apps, Walsh said. All the teams hang out together, further emphasizing the social aspect of the sports.

Some of the leagues at Social Boston Sports can take a more competitive edge, Walsh said. The company recently introduced an advanced volleyball league to satisfy the more die-hard athletes in the community, she said.

"We try to have something for everyone," Walsh said.

Social Boston Sports isn't the only game in town, though. Various other adult sports organizations offer everything from pickup hockey leagues to singles-only meet ups to ski vacations. Like Social Boston, Singles Sports League, Hub Sports Boston and Boston Ski and Sports Club all offer rolling registrations on day and league activities year round.

Boston-based startup creates reusable notebook that's analog and digital

With the Everlast Notebook by Rocketbook, you can write on paper and store your notes in the cloud.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

In this digital age, there are still those analog die-hards who prefer the feel of pen and paper.

Those who count themselves part of that community have probably gone through countless pens and notebooks in their lifetime. The pens are long gone and the notebooks are probably gathering dust or tossed out to save room.

But what if you could keep using the pen and paper, but just need one notebook forever?

That's the idea behind the Everlast Notebook, a reusable notebook created by Boston-based startup Rocketbook that combines classic pen-and-paper feel with cloud-based technology.

"Our attitude is to keep what people love about the writing experience, the pure paper-and-pen, then later on ... give digital life on top of that, without introducing weird hardware that isn't natural to adopt," said Joe Lemay, CEO and co-founder of Rocketbook and an MIT graduate.

The Everlast Notebook comes with its own pen — from the Pilot FriXion line — which adheres to the specialty writing surface.

Using the smartphone app, the notebook's pages are photographed then uploaded into the cloud-based service of choice, including Dropbox, Google Drive, Slack or an email account.

The Everlast Notebook received 70 times more money than its funding goal on Kickstarter. PROVIDED BY ROCKETBOOK

The Pilot pen doesn't smudge on Rocketbook's synthetic pages when wiped with something dry but comes right off when a moist cloth is applied. The feel, the company said, mimics that of a ball-point pen on paper.

In testing, the Everlast Notebook survived more than 1,000 uses. That this notebook could be "endlessly reusable" appeals to both environmentalists and minimalists, Lemay said, who want to reduce clutter while staying devoted to old-school pen and paper.

"It truly is a notebook that, so long as you take care of it, it can really last indefinitely," he said.

All of the materials in the Everlast are recyclable and BPA free, an additional environmental benefit, Lemay said.

"Who doesn't have a stack of notebooks from college collecting dust?" Lemay said. "We're breaking that paradigm."

While the creation mixes new and old technology, the funding effort is strictly 21st century.

The Everlast Notebook received $1.8 million through its Kickstarter campaign, 70 times the initial fundraising goal of $26,000.

Rocketbook also used Indiegogo's InDemand platform after its Kickstarter closed at the end of January, which allows the company to take more advance orders after the original funding campaign ends. Through Indiegogo, the Everlast Notebook received another $430,000.

Curt Schilling defends Breitbart editor's comments on pedophilia, later apologizes

The former Red Sox pitcher says he had "no idea of the video/audio" defending pedophiles prior to comments.

ERIN TIERNAN
@erintiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

In the latest Twitter escapades of Curt Schilling, the former Red Sox pitcher turned right-wing radio show host jumped to defend his Breitbart News colleague Milo Yiannopoulos, who came under fire this weekend after a video resurfaced of him apparently defending pedophilia.

Yiannopoulos condones sexual relationships between men and boys as young as 13 and downplays the seriousness of abuse by priests in the Catholic Church in the video, which is nearly three hours long.

After the video was

publicized by the news media, Yiannopoulos was dropped as a speaker at the Conservative Political Action Conference.

He later resigned from Breitbart News.

As the controversy stewed, Schilling took to Twitter Monday night to defend his colleague — later admitting he hadn't seen the video. Schilling hosts a radio show for Breitbart called "Whatever it Takes."

He battled back and forth with the twitterverse for the better part of an hour before someone sent him the link to the YouTube video.

He dialed back his remarks after listening to Yiannopoulos' remarks and apologized.

Schilling owned his mistake, but just a few hours earlier on Monday he was blasting news organizations like CNN and MSNBC for propagating what he called "fake" news.

Schilling is known for his off-the-cuff social media antics, engaging in drawn-out arguments with liberals headed to the Women's March on Washington the day after Donald Trump's inauguration.

In 2014 he got into a four-hour Twitter debate defending creationism.

Schilling was fired from ESPN last April following a Facebook post in which he appeared to mock the transgender community.

The year before that the sports news network suspended Schilling following a tweet he made about Islamic extremism.

In the now-deleted tweet Schilling said, "It's said only 5-10% of Muslims are extremists. In 1940, only 7% of Germans were Nazis. how'd that go?" His words were posted alongside an image of Hitler. He took down the tweet and issued a quick apology.

Gross: Johnny Depp is creeping on Daisy Ridley

Johnny Depp, a melted pile of gel eyeliner with a crippling scarf addiction, has found his newest would-be fountain of youth. According to Celebitchy, the 53-year-old has his eye on co-star Daisy Ridley, 24. Which makes sense, because it's looking more and more like he dates young women to suck the life out of them in order to prolong his own. A source on set of "Murder on the Orient Express" says that Depp has developed a crush, and it is definitely not mutual. "Daisy's in a tough spot. She clearly thinks the world of Johnny as an actor, but simply isn't interested in pursuing a romance with him," says the spy. "He isn't accustomed to being turned down, especially by a younger actress.

Johnny's convinced that if he cleans up his act, Daisy might change her mind." Exsqueeze me? It is far too late for Depp to clean up his act. He's been a hot mess for a long time now, and there's truly no turning back. Better luck next time, Edward Scissorhands.

Angelina Jolie doing damage control?

Angelina Jolie is making the rounds in support of her newest film, "First They Killed My Father," and because promoting a film is a dirty, dirty business, she's conveniently opening up about her messy-ass divorce from Brad Pitt. On "Good Morning America," the 41-year-old just happened to dish on all things Brangelina. According to Perez Hilton, she said

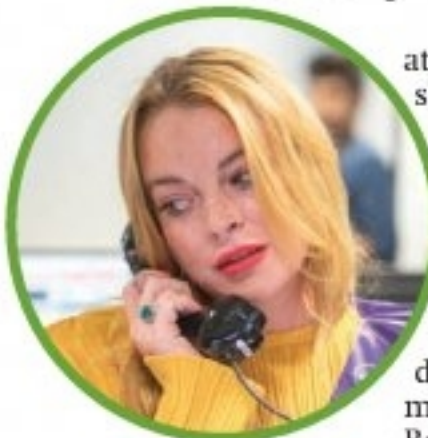

"We are focusing on the health of our family. So we will be stronger when we come out of this, because that's what we're determined to do as a family," she said. "We will always be a family." Mmmhmm. Please note, she told BBC World News the same thing, saying, "We are a family, and we will always be a family, and we will get through this time, and hopefully be a stronger family for it." It's almost like she's reading from a script! Jolie — who has famously never had a publicist — has reportedly been discreetly seeking one and hoping for an image overhaul. Because really, this whole thing has made both parties look pretty bad. So, yeah. Damage control.

Lindsay Lohan claims she was racially profiled

It seems like just yesterday we were talking about another ridiculous thing Lindsay Lohan had done — oh wait, that was yesterday. The "Mean Girls" star is at it again, and this time she's telling us about the time she, a white woman, was racially profiled. On "Good Morning Britain," the 30-year-old told Piers Morgan she was traveling from London to New York after meeting BFF President Recep Tayyip Erdoğan in Turkey. Then, while at Heathrow Airport, according to Vulture, she said, "[British Airport Security] opened my passport and saw 'Lindsay Lohan' and started immediately apologizing, but then said, 'Please take off your headscarf.' And I did, it's OK." Oh, honey. That's not how racial profiling works. Maybe you meant something else? The actress also opened up about how the experience made her consider what it might be like to be a nonwhite woman, and her confusing relationship with the Quran.

Ink Block's swanky new date night spot, Lion's Tail, will kick off their Tacos at the Tail happy hour today in honor of National Margarita Day. For each $13 marg you purchase, you have your pick of one of Chef Diego Osorno's four delectable tacos — ranging from braised short rib with guac and onion relish to tempura swordfish with pickled veg and Monterey habanero cheese — on the house. As for margaritas, you can sip their house concoction made with tequila, Combier liqueur, fresh lime and agave. 354 Harrison Ave., lionstailboston.com

The Painted Burro in Davis has pitted two incredibly tasty-sounding margaritas in a fight to the ... um, finish, for the days leading up to Margarita Day. For $14, guests can purchase a flight of both the prickly pear and wild berry lavender margaritas and cast their vote for the tastiest invention. The winner will be announced today when the favored flavor finds a permanent home on the menu. 219 Elm St., Somerville, thepaintedburro.com

You can DIY your own Don Julio margaritas at Tico tonight. A smorgasbord of sides, mix-ins and tequila will be up for grabs, while Michael Schlow's South End restaurant dishes out complimentary chips and salsa all night. DJ Dolo will be spinning live, so you won't need to rely solely on liquid courage when the rhythm takes you over. Bonus: $30 margarita pitchers will still be available all week through Feb. 26. 222 Berkley St., ticoboston.com

To celebrate, Cask 'n Flagon in Fenway will serve the cinnamon honey margarita, a one-night-only creation that combines Fireball and El Jimador Blanco for the most trouble-making of all trouble-making margaritas. They'll also shake up specialty flavors like strawberry jalapeño and peach. Pair with their house-smoked barbecue for a night of epically good decisions. 62 Brookline Ave., casknflagon.com

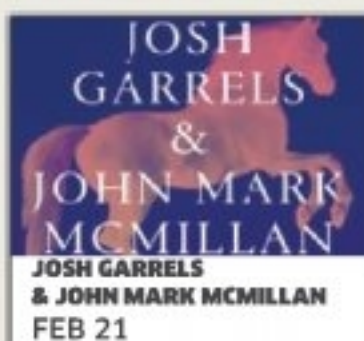

Celebrate the recent reopening of Back Bay favorite Lolita Cocina & Tequila Bar, where they'll be dishing out table-side tequila shots and an enhanced dining menu to go with their shiny new upgrades. (Um, Mexican-fried chicken, anyone?) With eight varieties of margaritas — ranging from elderflower-guava White Lie to the spicy strawberry Diablo — available by the pitcher and four extra fruity, extra boozy (with a splash of ancho chile or Lejay cassis for $2 more) frozen margs on the menu, you're sure to get your fix. 271 Dartmouth St., lolitacocinabars.com

Charlie Day likes playing smart. He doesn't do it often. Since 2005, he's filed over 100 episodes as Charlie, the dim-wittiest of the four monsters on "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia." But in "Fist Fight," Day gets to play a teacher. He's no inspirational educator. His school has long been plagued by crippling cutbacks, the kids are all rambunctious, and — worst of all — he pissed off a colleague (Ice Cube), who's challenged him to an after-school fight.

So, what's it like being punched by Ice Cube, or at least fake-movie-punched?

It's surreal! I'm a huge fan of Ice Cube, from when he was in NWA and his solo stuff. So it was surreal. And when you get a punch wrong, when it accidentally hits your forearm or something instead of missing you, it really hurts. He's a big guy; he can throw a real punch.

So Ice Cube accidentally punched you in the arm?

There

were plenty of times that happened. There were times when our forearms clashed, our knees banged together. Thank God no one got one on the nose by accident. We were both a little black-and-blue in some spots. We shot this over a year ago, and to be honest, my legs still hurt.

You've done stunts, but this is next-level.

It was the most physically demanding and exhausting thing I've ever done. My wife was saying,

"You're not allowed to ever do any stunts again." I said, "I don't want to." And we shot it consecutively. We wound up shooting the entire fight in a row because they were worried that the trees were going to lose all their leaves. If we put it off the fight wouldn't match. So it was all day, every day, 12- to 14-hour days of fighting, eight days in a row.

That sounds horrible.
Yeah, it was a really bad idea.

Back to school

Tell me about playing a teacher and having to say inspirational things to rooms of kids. It was fun for me. I'm the son of two teachers. I always enjoy when I get to play a character who's ... smart. [Laughs]

You should play more smart characters. You got to play one in "Pacific Rim": an excitable scientist who babbles gobbledygook.

The problem with playing a scientist in a movie where giant monsters are coming out of the sea is learning all that mumbo-jumbo. You have to learn some BS science and know what it means.

So you wouldn't just memorize the words and not know what it means? No, no. I have to give myself a meaning in my head for what each term meant. I had to believe I understood the science behind it. If it's just words, I won't remember them.

Finally catching a (February) break

The Downhill Report

ERIC WILBUR
@GlobeEricWilbur

As the headline of Saturday's Conway Daily Sun boasted upon greeting visitors to New Hampshire's Mount Washington Valley: "Best vacation week ever!"

Hard to argue.

After more than 3 feet of snow fell upon one of the Northeast's most popular skiing destinations over the previous two weeks, nearly every mountain in the area — including Attitash Mountain Resort, Wildcat Mountain, Cranmore Mountain Resort, Bretton Woods Resort, Black Mountain and King Pine Ski Area — was running 100 percent open, just in time for what is normally the busiest time for New Hampshire's ski industry.

Add a dash of sunshine, moderate temperatures and a number of extra activities planned during school vacation at ski areas throughout New England, and it's clearly prime time in the mountains, no matter where you might be headed.

In a previous life, these kind of conditions, paired with the promise of bluebird days, might have me playing the role of skiing nomad for a stretch of time, satisfied with sleeping wherever there was a roof, awaking with the only promise of having my legs ready to navigate the sun-splashed snow for days at a time.

But with my third- and first-grade sons off for the week, the Presidents Day break has finally morphed into something different.

For the past few years, this simply meant going through the grind. Yes, they have always gravitated toward lessons. Standing in the rental line wasn't always the headache it could be. And my sons would be the last two to complain about the cold and needing a hot chocolate 10 minutes into standing in our first lift line.

But they were still students, still trying to grasp how this all made sense. And when it came time for me to ski with them following their lessons, one run normally would take the bulk of an hour as I skied slowly behind them, ready to pick them up upon falling to the ground, whiny and tired.

This year? We're skiing together.

While my oldest was prepared to take the next step in his skiing prowess this winter, his natural ability ready to progress further, it was my younger son, 6 years old, who was attempting to play catch-up, without paying attention to honing his own skills. It was only two weeks ago when he began a multiweek program at Blue Hills Ski Area in Milton, and after watching him pop the skis on for the first time this winter, then nearly fall into a rock garden after losing control of his footing, I remained suspect.

But then last week, he remained in control as fresh snow fell about the learning area.

A week later, both of them took the opportunity for private lessons at Black Mountain, in Jackson, New Hampshire, and came back to the lodge ready to show off their turns. The difference after a 90-minute session was remarkable.

By Monday, the three of us were cozying up together on the triple chair lift at King Pine, in Madison, New Hampshire. Every time one of them fell, he got right back up. No whining. No crying. Run after run after run. They're both up to intermediate runs. The younger one thinks he's ready for the black diamond. The older one is rolling his eyes at this confidence.

By the time 3:30 came around, neither of them wanted to stop, even with the lure of going out for dinner and dessert awaiting. My wife's knowing smile relayed what I had already figured out; that the anticipation of raising them to love the sport had finally subsided. It's now a reality.

My kids are skiers. (Well, two out of three ain't bad for now.)

Best vacation week ever. No doubt.

Somerville Squares

Bustling Davis Square is packed with entertainment and food options for the whole family. DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

From Davis to Ball, Somerville real estate prices continue to skyrocket.

MEGAN JOHNSON
letters@metro.us

You've heard the comparisons before, and they're only becoming more frequent.

"[Somerville] is the Williamsburg, Brooklyn, of Massachusetts," says O'Necia Simpson, Realtor at Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in Cambridge. "There is a tremendous influx of millennial foodies, the young, educated tech guru and the hipster starter family all throughout Somerville."

But don't for a second think it's just the skinny jeans and organic coffee that'll make you think of Brooklyn. Just like the New York borough, real estate price tags in Somerville are still skyrocketing. Simpson says one-to-two bedroom rentals in Somerville's Davis Square area range from $1,900 to $3,000 per month, while the average sale price of a two-bed, one-bath condo can be $500,000 to $700,000.

And don't get your hopes up for a single-family home; if one does end up on the market (which they rarely do) the price tags are brutal.

"There are rarely any single families available, and a healthy budget for one starts at roughly $850,000 to well over $1 million," says Simpson.

Simpson has witnessed Somerville's boom firsthand. Seven years ago, she and her husband purchased a townhouse condo beside an empty industrial site. Within two years, the entire site was redeveloped into the Windsor at Maxwell's Green complex, which was filled within a year. Though the two-bed, three-and-a-half bath townhouses originally sold for around $645,000 in 2013, by 2016 some of the same units sold for over $1 million.

"There is almost always a bidding war on most properties and a lot of times you are going up against investors with cash," adds Simpson.

Most realtors agree their clients are attracted to the neighborhood for the same characteristics. Thalia Tringo, broker/owner of Thalia Tringo & Associates Real Estate, says the most common reasons she hears for choosing Somerville are its walkability to shops and restaurants, and public transit access.

"All of Somerville attracts interest, but the neighborhoods that usually garner the most interest and highest prices are the ones within .75 miles of a subway stop," says Tringo.

Davis Square continues to be the most highly coveted Somerville neighborhood, while Union Square's boom in popularity is obvious, and will become only more so with the Green Line Extension. Ball Square and Teele Square are often picked for their "calmer, laid-back vibe," says Simpson.

And with more Somerville residents choosing to bypass the suburbs once they have children, the city's desirability only continues to increase — as do the number of children you see around the neighborhood.

"Seven years ago there were hardly any young kids on our street — now it's as if everyone has a stroller, a baby attached to them or a bun in the oven," says Simpson, who herself has twin daughters. "Everyone wants an urban life and are willing to pay a pretty penny for it."

WIGGINS 'BULLIED' IN WNBA

Candice Wiggins, who played in the WNBA for the New York Liberty among other teams, told the San Diego Union-Tribune this week that she was bullied by other players in the league for not being a lesbian. Wiggins suggested that 98 percent of players in the WNBA are homosexual and described the culture of the league as "very, very harmful."

"Me being heterosexual and straight, and being vocal in my identity as a straight woman was huge," Wiggins said. "People were deliberately trying to hurt me all left basketball at the age of 29, also slammed the WNBA's low TV ratings. "It was a depressing state in the WNBA," she said. "It's not watched. Our value is diminished."

of the time. I had never been called the B-word so many times in my life than I was in my rookie season. I'd never been thrown to the ground so much. The message was: 'We want you to know we don't like you.'"

Wiggins, who

ALL IMAGES GETTY

BOAT BRAGGADOCIOUS

As if Patriots haters weren't sick enough of the now five-time champs, we learned this week that Bill Belichick (pictured here with Kid Rock) wasted little time in changing the name of his boat — again. Up until last week, Belichick's boat was named "Six Rings," signifying the six Super Bowl rings that he owned (Belichick also won two Super Bowl titles as the defensive coordinator of the Giants).

In a photo captured by Barstool Sports, a shirtless man with the shape of Belichick was spotted sunbathing on a boat in Jupiter, Florida, this week, and sure enough the detail on the vessel was already updated — just 16 days after the Super Bowl. Welcome "VII Rings" to your waters, America.

THE ROCK FOR PREZ

Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson's approval rating across the U.S. has to be somewhere around 99.7 percent. If the Dems want to defeat Trump (or rather Mike Pence, since Trump is on track to be impeached by Memorial Day) in 2020, they should just give The Rock the nod now.

The man simply brings people together. On Monday, he called former WWE superstar CM Punk in the middle of the ring after the show went off the air. In case you didn't know, Punk despises WWE (like, for real) and has alleged that Vince McMahon bankrolled a defamation lawsuit against him. That didn't stop The Rock from calling Punk on his personal cellphone in the middle of the ring Monday night when fans began chanting Punk's name to get a rise out of The Great One.

"Hey Punk, it's Rock, this is not a joke. I'm literally calling you from the middle of the Staples Center with about 15,000 strong. I hope you can hear this. They are chanting your name!"

Obviously The Rock is bigger than WWE at this point, so there's not much McMahon could have done other than giving The Rock a disapproving nod after the stunt.

SPORTS GONE SOFT

So this Syracuse fan called the head coach of the Georgia Tech basketball team, Josh Pastner, and complained that Tech fans were being too mean by chanting "air ball" at one of Syracuse's players every time he touched the ball in a recent game.

Yes, the "air ball" chant — sports' most innocuous jeer that would not even offend your Great Aunt Gertrude.

The only good part about this story is that Pastner actually called this guy back and defended the Georgia Tech fans.

"I told him this is men's college elite basketball and the 'air ball' chant has been going around since Dr. James Naismith invented the game," Pastner said. "I said, Sir, this is not Little League, sir. I would agree with you if this was your local YMCA league for sixth graders."

Aries Question your motives if someone tries to block your achievements. Clear up any misunderstanding before you assume a position that requires transparency.

Taurus Getting along with your peers will be in your best interest. If you call upon people you have worked with in the past, you'll be given inside information that will help you.

Gemini Your ability to express what you want to see happen will encourage others to help you make your plan a success. A chance encounter will result in a great opportunity.

Cancer Educate yourself and work hard to achieve your goals. Seek advice from experienced pros, but don't be afraid to put your own spin on things. Trust in your ability.

Leo Traveling, learning and interacting with interesting people will encourage you to make lifestyle changes. Physical action will bring positive results.

Virgo Make affordable plans with children, family or a loved one. Living within your means will help you enjoy the day instead of adding to your stress.

Libra Trouble will surface when dealing with domestic or relationship matters. Be willing to compromise and discuss concerns openly. Strive for equality, and peace of mind.

Scorpio Be careful what you share with your peers. Someone will use personal information against you to deter your progress. Don't overreact to someone's argument.

Sagittarius Personal improvements will lead to unexpected gains. Refuse to let an emotional incident cost you. Keep your mind on the facts, and move forward.

Capricorn An emotional situation will escalate into an unsavory encounter if you get involved with people who don't share your values or beliefs. Proceed with caution.

Aquarius Bring about positive change. Altering your appearance or methods will make others take notice. Follow through with your plans if you want to prosper.

Pisces You need to be the one to decide what's best for yourself. Look over personal paperwork to find information that will help you make better choices. EUGENIA LAST
